

Wikipedia

FUNNIEST SHOWS

By: Kara Lynch

Most of us are exhausted when we get home from our nine to five. This often means we skip the gym, skip doing laundry and skip cooking dinner. We're all busy and tired, but there are certain rituals we cannot deny ourselves. We all deserve to unwind with a good laugh every single day. The number one thing no one should skip is a funny show to cap off the night. Everyone needs a release at the end of the day and I'm going to take you through the funniest shows on Netflix and Hulu to get you there!

1. The Office

"The Office" satires how people coexist in a modern office setting. The boss, Michael Scott, played by Steve Carell, is the undesirable, stereotyped awful boss. He is unorganized and mistreats his employees. His ignorance is difficult to look away from and somehow hilarious. It is easy to laugh at the other characters and follow the whacky romances that unfold. Warning: No one on the show is normal. But then again, who is normal in real life?

2. Parks and Recreation

This show follows the employees of a rural town's Parks and Recreation Department. The characters are unrealistically insane which makes the show funny and absurd. "Parks and Rec" spoofs common issues in small towns like tax laws, fast food chains, town meetings and the building of parks and other public forums.

This show features actors like Amy Poehler, Chris Pratt and the not so hard on the eyes, Rob Lowe. Lowe plays a health freak who is playfully and adorably in denial of his own mortality. This is definitely one of my favorite shows to watch.

3. Insecure

Warning: This show is not all fun and games. "Insecure" addresses issues in the LGBTQ community like coming out and bi invisibility. The name implies that several of the characters are never satisfied, particularly the main character, Debby Ryan. After losing a ton of weight, Ryan still struggles to find happiness and break her binge eating habits. As we follow the characters and their issues, we can relate to their struggles while also laughing at the relatable absurdities life throws. The acting is phenomenal in this truly crazy, funny and relatable show. Expect a guest appearance from National Lampoon's Beverly D'Angelo and a talented group of actors including Alyssa Milano and Dallas Roberts.

4. The Boondocks

I've saved the least politically correct show for last. "The Boondocks" is also the only cartoon I've included. This show spoofs common stereotypes among black people and white people. It's not for the light of heart and you can expect a lot of wildness. But, if you're looking for some crude humor and a complete satire of race and politics, this is the show for you. Like "Family Guy," the show makes fun of political and pop culture issues that will have you roaring. The show stars the talented Regina King, as twins Riley and Huey Freeman, with other actors including John Witherspoon and Cedric Yarbrough.